

Rep. John Jenco Has Intro- duced Bill For State Appropriation To Build Wolf Road

The Wolf Road advocates are determined to get this highway concreted from the Lincoln highway thru Mokena north on Wolf Road to connect up with the Southwest highway at the Will-Cook County line north of Mokena and in view of this determination a bill has been introduced in the legislature the past week by Representative John M. Jenco asking for an appropriation of $200,000 to construct six and a half miles

A BILL
For an Act providing for the construction and maintenance of a hard surfaced road connecting Route No. 51 with the Southwest highway in Cook County.

Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly:

For the purpose of connecting Route No. 51 with the Southwest highway in Cook County, the Department of Public Works and Buildings is authorized and directed to construct and maintain a durable hard-surfaced road, approximately six and one-half miles in length, commencing on Route No. 51 at a point on the east side of Section 6, Township thirty-four (34) North, Range twelve (12) East of the Third Principal Meridian, and running due North on Wolf Road along the east side of Sections 31, 30, 19, 18, 7 and 6 of township thirty-five (35) North, Range twelve (12) East of the Third Principal Meridian to the county boundary line of Will and Cook counties to connect with the projected Southwest highway in Cook county.

Section 2. There is appropriated the sum of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary to the Department of Public Works and Buildings for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act.

S. W. Highway May Come on Wolf Road

Last Saturday night a very representative gathering attended the meeting of the Southwest (Downs) Chamber of Commerce at the Orland Park school parlors. The new Southwest Highway was the chief topic discussed. The matter of Will County hooking up with Cook County's road building program by way of the Wolf Road also was discussed.

Dr. Sherman Knox presided as chairman of the meeting. Quite a number of road boosters were called on for remarks. Ona E. McGovney, vice president for Mokena of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce gave a brief outline of what Will County expects to do on a county bond issue.

Mr. Cowan of Palos Park also gave a graphic account of what Cook County is going to do with a road program this summer.

Supervisors North of Joliet and Melfer of Homen gave addresses on the proposed County bond issue in Will county.

Commissioner Wm. Busse of Cook County was the speaker of the evening and gave a very interesting summary of hard road work in his county and of the proposed Southwest highway. Mr. Busse made a very significant remark when he said that Cook County is very anxious to hook up with Will County. He said he was willing to help Mokena get a hard road and in order to make easy connections he said he would suggest that the Southwest highway be routed thru Orland west on 143rd Street and then south on Wolf Road to the Will-Cook county line.

L. G. Bruder of Mokena said the Mokena hard road advocates had a bill in the legislature now asking for a special appropriation to build Wolf Road from the Lincoln highway to the Southwest highway. He handed a copy of the bill to Mr. Busse. Mr. Bruder then introduced Mr. Hall who drew the bill which Rep. John M. Jenco has introduced. Dr. Knox invited Mr. Hall to give an address which he did and which made a splendid impression. Following the road meeting the good ladies of Orland served coffee and lunch. Latter the school parlors were turned over to dancing.

Schussler Elected Mayor of Orland Park by 1 Vote

Orland had a hotly contested village election Tuesday. With two strong tickets in the field 259 votes were cast. Henry Waje was the candidate for mayor on the by petition ticket and W. R. Schussler, present mayor was a candidate for re-election on the People's ticket and won out by 1 vote. Edgar Cooper and George Cox on the People's ticket and Wm. Kollman on the by petition ticket were elected as aldermen.

Mokena Elects New Board of Trustees

Mokena had a warm election with two tickets in the field. The big fight centered on the aldermen and as a result the entire People's ticket was elected as follows: Edward Marti 185; Paul J. Roesner 150 August Werner 120. On the Village Ticket Geo. J. Hacker was the only candidate elected, being re-elected mayor without opposition. The defeated candidates are: Harvey Reab 107; W. R. Lynk 58; Herman Schweser 64.

Tinley Defeats Band Proposition

The voters of Tinley Park did not take kindly toward the special proposition ballots at the village election on last Tuesday when they defeated three special issues. The municipal band proposition was defeated with a vote of 43 to 75. The Rauhoff subdivision annexation and the sparring and wrestling propositions were badly defeated. Wm. Funk was elected mayor and Bert H. Fulton, Wm. Wannemacher and Chas. Nielson were elected aldermen, all without opposition.

Deputy Fisher's Slayer Gets 25 Year Sentence

The only eye witness to the slaying of Deputy Sheriff Walter Fisher of Mokena on April 14, 1926 took the witness stand Thursday in the Criminal court, Chicago before Judge Philip L. Sullivan and identified Daniel Hesley, a former Senn High School star athlete, as the slayer.

The witness was Barney Hostert, Mokena garage mechanic, whose car was commandeered by deputy sheriff Fisher to pursue Hesley, who a few hours before had robbed a mail truck at Indiana Harbor of $37,000. Dr. E. G. MacMahon, Mokena, whose car was stolen, according to the state, by Hesley after the mail truck which he used, broke down, also took the stand for the state. Mrs. Fisher, the widow also was in court.

Late Thursday the jury returned a verdict of guilty against Hesley for the murder of deputy sheriff Fisher and sentenced him for 25 years. Shortly after he was arrested last April, Hesley was tried by the Government for robbing the mail, found guilty and sentenced to Ft. Leavenworth for 25 years. On the two sentences Hesley has 50 years to serve.

U. of C. Students Making Survey of Crops, Soils, Etc.

Twenty-five University of Chicago students under the leadership of Dr. W. D. Jones, of the department of geology are studying crops and farm buildings, stock and soil conditions near Mokena. A number of students are here several times a week. They expect to carry on their studies here until June.

Voice of the People

NOTICE—Communications for this column must be plainly written and on only one side of the paper. THE NAME OF THE WRITER MUST ACCOMPANY a communication as a matter of good faith, not to be printed if the writer prefers that it not be done.—Editor.

Please permit me to reply to a letter which appeared in your "Voice of the People" column last week.

"A Hard Road Booster": The information upon which you based your letter is incorrect, and for your benefit and those who are in doubt, I give the following facts, which may be easily verified.

Supervisor Lankenau at no time used any direct influence that induced the legislators to place Route 51 on Keane Ave.; he did not even know that Route 51 was routed thru Frankfort until the map was published; neither did he, nor any committee from Frankfort, at any time prior to the passage of the act and approval by the voters, go to Springfield for the purpose of getting route 51 thru Frankfort, on Keane Ave.

Route 51 was proposed and delineated by the 53rd General Assembly of the Illinois Legislature, in its effort to connect then existing highways and to complete the highways proposed under the previous Sixty Million dollar bond issue, and for which purpose a Hundred Million bond issue was submitted to the voters of Illinois.

The present location of Route 51 was shown on a map published prior to the election on November 4th, 1924 at which time the voters approved the act by a majority of approximately 3 to 1.

Route 51 was written into the law as designated, and as a consequence could not legally thereafter be rerouted over any other road, as the law permits only minor changes, whereby hazards can be reduced or some other material advantage over the planned routes can be gained at small cost.

Most of your questions regarding Mr. Lankenau's activities are based, apparently, either on ignorance of the above facts, or malice, for that reason, I will pass them by without comment.

Getting closer to home, "Mr. Hard Road Booster": you attempt to chide public officials of Mokena for neglect of their duties, but since you do not mention names, it of course is impossible to check their actions. But I would like to know where you were at that time, and what you were doing then? Didn't you know that the $100,000,000 bond issue proposition was on the ballot on November 4, 1924? Didn't you know that Route 51 was routed on Keane Ave. thru Frankfort? If you did, why didn't you say something then, instead of waiting nearly 2 1/2 years? Did you vote at the Presidential election November 4th, 1924 when the bond issue was on the ballot? Did you vote on the bond issue proposition? Did you vote "Yes?"

Was it modesty, or lack of activity in the right direction, that compelled you to withhold your name and sign yourself "A Hard Road Booster"? Your effort to attack Mr. Lankenau for his alleged activity, and the others for their alleged inactivity is scandalous and undoubtedly malicious, and I can only express my contempt for your actions.
N. F. HEIMAN, Mokena.

ROADS ON BOND ISSUE

Editor, News-Bulletin:
We demand that only the main traveled roads that serve the greater number of people be placed on the bond issue for hard roads in Will County and not such roads that serve acreage purchased by Real Estate firms, Agents or politicians for speculation to increase the value of such acreage.

Also that the roads in Will County that form a connection with Cook County hard roads now built or to be built by Cook County be the first hard roads to be built in Will County under the Bond Issue.

Mokena Names Bond Issue Roads

Mokena is now preparing to get two roads delineated on the proposed $2,500,000 Will County Bond Issue for hard road.

A citizens mass meeting was held Thursday evening at the Mokena school house and was attended by over 100 enthusiastic road boosters. The meeting was called to order by Ona E. McGovney. N. F. Heiman was selected chairman and John Balaz secretary.

This meeting was called for the purpose of giving all interested in hard roads a voice in the selection of roads to be placed on the county bond issue map which will likely be taken up by the Will County board of supervisors at their meeting next week.

Four suggestions were made as follows: Don C. Hall introduced a resolution that 3 1/2 miles be built on Wolf Road from Lincoln Highway north to the Southwest Highway at the Will and Cook county line. John Horrace suggested that the road from Route 51 on Frankfort road be paved southwest to Mokena coming in on the gravel road to the Lawrence Kohl corner, then south into the Village of Mokena down front street to Wolf road, a distance of 2 one-half miles thus making 6 miles with the proposed paving of 3 one-half miles on Wolf road. The mileage to be allotted Frankfort township under the proposed county bond issue will be six miles it is understood. G. W. Maue suggested that 2 miles of Maple Street road northeast of Mokena be paved to Wolf Road. C. M. Cleveland suggested that the entire six miles be placed on Wolf Road.

Each suggestion was carefully debated and considered and finally the suggestions of Mr. Hall and of Mr. Horrace were combined in a joint resolution and voted thru as the roads desired by Mokena to be designated for Frankfort township's quota of hard roads under the proposed county bond issue. The resolution was passed by a unanimous rising vote. Chairman Lankenau of the County Board was quoted as favoring the road proposed thru the village of Mokena from Route 51.

Mr. Hall made a very masterful address in which he outlined every section of his resolution and also told of a meeting he had the same day with Major Quinlan, Supt. of Highways of the Cook County highway department. He showed that Cook County wants to hook up with Will county and favor Wolf Road as the logical link from the Southwest highway to the Lincoln highway.

Mr. Hall was the main spoke in the wheel and much credit is due him for the harmonious manner in which the meeting was conducted. Mr. Hall has had much legislative experience, having been a member of the Wisconsin legislature and Mokena is very fortunate in having a man of his type to guide its road destinies.

The proposal to concrete the main street is hailed as an undertaking of big magnitude inasmuch as it is estimated that it will save about $80,000 to the village and will give this community a state aid road. Paving of Wolf Road north and south will take care of the west side of the corporate limits. This is the biggest boom Mokena could look for in the road building line. Everyone should work for these logical roads as they are very important highways and will mean more to Mokena than can at present be realized.

Hon. John Jenco, Lottie Holman O'Neill and M. Henneberry, our representatives from this district were highly complimented by Mr. Hall in the course of his remarks for their efficient and effective work at Springfield. He said Mr. Jenco, the new member was making a splendid record.

Mr. Cowan of Palos Park, one of the real boosters for hard roads, was present at the meeting and as usual gave much useful information clarifying the situation and helping along with the good work.

Frankfort Has Hot Election; Fink Mayor

Frankfort had a veritable battle of votes last Tuesday in the annual village election. The hottest part of the fight centered on the office of mayor. Max H. Haass who was mayor for many years was up for re-election. He was opposed by Christ Fink. After the battle was over the returns showed Fink the victor with 24 votes majority. The vote was as follows: Max F. Haass for mayor on Village ticket 138; Christ Fink on Citizens ticket 164. For village trustees Village ticket Fred Marti 117; John Weitendorf, 148; B. Zechlin 131. Citizens ticket for aldermen Frank Eisenbrandt, 161; Conrad Oetter 131; Wm. Kampe 189. The new lineup is as follows: mayor Christ Fink; aldermen Frank Eisenbrandt, John Weitendorf and Wm. Kampe.

This is the biggest political house cleaning Frankfort has had in 20 years.

Fails to Deliver Goods; Arrested

E. T. Buell of Blue Island, who worked the small towns about Blue Island claiming he was representing the Watkins Company, was arrested several weeks ago on a warrant sworn out by Philip E. Steffen, Jr. village clerk of Orland. According to the story as told by Mr. Steffen, Buell came to his home and asked Mrs. Steffen to order some of the Watkins products. Instead of making delivery and then asking for money Buell asked Mrs. Steffen to pay in advance and said the goods would come via parcel post. After waiting a certain length of time and not receiving the goods ordered, the Watkins company was appealed too and advised that Buell was not in their employ. The case came up in Blue Island a week ago and Buell was bound over to the grand jury. He is said to have cleaned up a thousand dollars.

Sanitation Kills
All Swine Risks

Use of System Transforms Industry on Many Farms, at Small Cost.

On many farms the hog business has been transformed through the use of the simple system of swine sanitation which the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, has been demonstrating over the state during the past few years in co-operation with county farm advisers and interested farmers, according to E. T. Robbins, live stock extension specialist.

Last year, for instance, 1,213 farmers in 75 counties of the state co-operated in demonstrating the methods and results of the system to their neighbors. Before the end of the year there were 100 written reports sent in by farm demonstrators from 38 counties. These have been summarized to show results under practical farm conditions.

Sanitation Pays Best.

These farmers raised 94 per cent of the pigs which were saved at farrowing time, and only one runt developed among every 71 pigs on the average, as compared with one runt to each 11 pigs among those raised the old way. With sanitation the litters raised averaged 1.5 pigs more than previously upon the same farms; the pigs averaged 24 pounds heavier when four months old, and they were ready for market at usual weights when they averaged six weeks younger than usual. The sanitation pigs proved to be more profitable than others, and the men plan to continue to use this sanitation system.

Reports from 39 counties indicate that sanitation herds are comparatively free from "serum breaks" and other troubles after vaccination; that they seem to escape "flu" better than other herds, and that they seem to show more resistance to cholera than do herds raised the old-style "wormy way."

Expensive Equipment Not Needed.

The sanitation system does not require expensive equipment nor supplies. The reports show that the size of litters raised to four months old was actually increased by the use of small field houses for farrowing. The size of litters raised was not much affected by the month of farrowing. The average was 6.3 pigs a litter.

There were fewest runts to 100 pigs where no hogs had been on the pasture for at least a year. The percentage of runts was smallest in large pastures. There were also the fewest runts where there was running water to drink.

There was very little loss of sanitation pigs from sore mouth whether their sharp teeth were cut at birth or not. The size of litters raised was not increased nor the number of runts reduced by the use of expensive minerals. The largest litters were raised and there were the fewest runts where the sanitation work was thoroughly done.

With such a splendid showing in health, vigor, uniformity, cheap gains and larger profits in sanitation herds, it is safe to conclude, as many farmers have said, that, "This is the right way to raise pigs in Illinois," Robbins said.

Early Radishes Favored
Over Later Varieties

Radishes have been cultivated by men for many ages. In medieval times, barons spiced the feasts in the castles with dishes of the long and very hot varieties now grown for summer use, such as Chartier and White Strassburg. These take twice as long to mature as the early varieties now available to us, such as the earliest White Olive, Twenty Day, Saxa and Scarlet Globe. Improvements in most vegetables run decidedly to the production of varieties which mature earlier, and probably the greatest advantage which we have over our ancestors in the vegetable garden is the possession of more early kinds. The early radishes are more tender and milder in flavor than the late sorts, but at the same time, quick to turn pithy, so they must be eaten as soon as they mature.

Agricultural Facts

High wages accent the "saving" in labor-saving equipment.

Chickens need sunlight to prevent rickets. Don't be stingy—sunlight is free.

Soy bean hay is a close second to alfalfa. Ground soy beans are fully equal to linseed meal in feeding value.

A coating of wax on the kitchen linoleum makes it easier to clean, makes it wear better, and gives it a rich luster.

Nine times out of ten cheap seed is priced low because it contains much dirt or weed seeds, or it has a low germination.

An excellent way to stimulate demand for any commodity is to improve the quality of that thing and then tell everybody about it.

A VARIETY OF DISHES

We think of pork as a winter food, but it will take the place in the following dishes of other fats:

Pork Cake.—Take one cupful of salt pork chopped, cover with one cupful of boiling water, three eggs, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of raisins, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one cupful of molasses and two cupfuls of dried apple chopped, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg. Cook the molasses, dried apple and spices on the back of the stove for three hours, then add the other ingredients and flour to make the desired thickness. Bake in a large loaf.

Broiled Smoked Herring.—Cover the herring with herring water for ten minutes. While the fish is still hot drain and wipe dry and brush with two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one of lemon juice and a dash of paprika. Sprinkle with parsley when ready to serve.

Jellied Chicken.—Cut up a four-pound chicken as for fricassee. Put on to cook with one small onion, one bay leaf, one blade of mace, three cloves, pepper and salt to taste. Simmer slowly until the chicken is tender. When done cut it from the bones and skin. Put the bones and skin back into the kettle and simmer an hour. Cover one-fourth of a box of gelatin with a little cold water and let it soak. Add gelatin to the liquor, stir until dissolved, then strain. Add salt and pepper to season. There should be three cupfuls of the liquor when done. The next day remove the fat from the top of the jelly, then pour half of it into a square mold and stand on ice to harden. When firm put a layer of the chicken on top of the jelly, add slices of hard-cooked egg, using three; sprinkle with seasoning, add more chicken and eggs until all are used. Pour over the remainder of the jelly, which should cover the chicken. Let stand on ice overnight before unmolding.

Vienna Sausages.—Chop one-fourth of a pound each of raw lean beef and veal, removing all the tougher portions. Season with salt, paprika and celery salt, a few gratings of nutmeg, a teaspoonful each of onion juice and lemon juice. Add one beaten egg and mix well, then shape into small steaks. Put into a well buttered hot pan and fry brown on both sides. Cook six to eight minutes.

Seasonable Foods.

Those who like and can eat veal will enjoy the following dish:

Paprika Schnitzel.—Cut two pounds of thick veal steak into small pieces and roll in seasoned flour. Brown in fat from several slices of salt pork.

Remove the meat from the pan and add two tablespoonfuls of flour to the fat in the pan, brown lightly, then pour in the liquid from a can of tomatoes. Add a slice each of onion and carrot and a blade of mace, then return the meat to the sauce. Cover and simmer for three-fourths of an hour. When done remove the meat to a hot platter, add paprika and seasonings to the sauce and pour over the meat.

Chicken With Macaroni.—Take a cupful or two of minced chicken, a cupful of macaroni. Cook the macaroni until tender in salted, boiling water, drain and put a layer into a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of chicken, then one of white sauce, repeat until all is used. Cover with buttered crumbs and brown.

Sardine Sandwich.—Drain two cans of sardines. Remove the skins and bones and mince very fine. Then pound to a paste with one tablespoonful of anchovy paste. Press the yolks of six hard-cooked eggs through a ricer and finely chop the whites. Season with salt and cayenne and mix all together. Cut sandwiches after preparing, into narrow strips and serve with a potato salad.

Oatmeal Gruel.—Grind one-half cupful of oatmeal, put into a tumbler and fill with cold water. Stir and pour off the milky water into a saucepan, fill the glass again, pour off, repeat as long as the water looks milky. Set the saucepan on the back of the stove and simmer for two hours. Strain, season with salt and serve with thin cream or milk.

The important thing to remember in preparing gruels is that a long time is needed to soften and dissolve the starch in the grains, which is not easily digested unless well cooked.

Oatmeal Sausage.—Take stock in which meat has been cooked and when boiling hot thicken with oatmeal; season well with salt and when nearly done add some chopped meat. Pour out into a mold and when cold slice and fry the same as any scrapple.

"Ta-wan-ne-ars has only one regret that he is to die," he said. "That is because he cannot live to find your lost soul and return it to you."

She laughed harshly. "Ta-wan-ne-ars is a child," she said. "His heart is turned to water. He talks of things which are not. My soul is here." She tapped her left breast. "It does not matter, however, for the Ga-go-sa Ho-nun-as-tase-ta does not need a soul as other mortals do."

She turned on her heel abruptly, and followed the priests into the long bark house from which they had emerged. The great mob of Indians melted away as soon as she left us. They all but fled in order to reach their lodges before sundown, and so hurried were our guards that in so moving us from the stakes to the Council-House in the center of the village they forebore to beat or maltreat us.

In the Council-House they supplied us with a liberal meal of meat and vegetables. Then our bonds were replaced and we were covered with robes, whilst our guards covered close to the fire in adjacent bays. They started at the slightest movement. Had we been able to stir hand or foot I think we might have won our freedom. But they used care in binding us, and we lay inert as corpses.

"What do they fear?" I whispered to Ta-wan-ne-ars at length, desirous of hearing a friendly voice.

"I do not know exactly, brother," he said. "These Cahnugas are renegades from the Great League."

"But the Moon feast they talk about," I persisted. "What is that?" "It is some invention of their own," he replied. "Perhaps Murray or De Veulle helped them with it. My people know nothing of such things."

Through the bark walls of the house came the weird, mellow melody which had attended the appearance of the Mistress of the False Faces, mingled with shrieks, groans, screams and yells. Our guards huddled closer together. They abandoned their weapons and covered their heads with blankets. A drum throbbed near by, and at intervals sounded the wailing chant of the masked priests and the thudding of dancing feet.

The uproar increased in violence. Women's voices, some in dreadful protestation, some in eager ecstasy, joined in it. It was near, then, at a distance, then returning. And occasionally that one shrill, sweet voice quelled the saturnalia and was lifted on a note of pagan exultation—only to be drowned in the thrumming of drums.

Our fire dwindled and was rekindled. The night crept on toward the dawn. The monotony of the noises, the endless repetition, deadened the senses, and we slept. When I awakened, 'twas to see the daylight trickling through the smoke-hole in the roof.

Somewhere in the sunshine a bird began to sing, and my captors yawned and sat up. The squat chief, his fears of the night gone, kicked Ta-wan-ne-ars awake.

"This is the day of the Moon feast," he said. "You will soon clamor to die."

CHAPTER X

The Moon Feast

We were yanked to our feet and pushed outside. Thousands of Indians lined the narrow, dirty streets between the bark houses and lodges. They greeted us with a silence so intent that it was as arresting as a shout. Not a finger was laid upon us, not a voice was raised. Yet the fierce anticipation which gleamed in every face was more threatening than definite gestures.

Ahead of us opened the flat expanse of the dancing-place, with the two lonely stakes, flanked by piles of freshly gathered firewood, standing like portents of evil against the dark-green background of the pines which walled the rear of the amphitheater.

Ta-wan-ne-ars looked eagerly in every direction, but she whom he sought was not present nor were there visible any of the carrion crew of priests. Only the sinister faces of the negro, Tom, and Bolling, with his tangle of red hair, stirred recollections in that alien, hostile mass.

Our guards bound us to the stakes as they had the day before, and Ta-wan-ne-ars, with a significant glance at me, rallied them with the searching wit of his race.

"The Cahnuga dogs are not used to taking captives," he commented. "They are women. They should be tilling the field. They do not know how to torment real warriors."

When they were passing the thongs under his arm-pits, the Seneca bent forward and fastened his teeth in the forearm of the incautious guard. The blood spurted and the man yelped with pain. Ta-wan-ne-ars laughed.

"Unarmed and bound, yet I can hurt you," he cried. "Truly, you are women. The warriors of the Great League scorn you."

Strangely enough, they had no retaliation upon him; but, having so securely fastened us to the stakes, withdrew and stood somewhat apart from the encompassing crowds.

The silence continued for more than an hour, when a lane was opened opposite to us and Murray and De Veulle sauntered forward.

"I trust you have fared well, Master Juggins—I beg pardon, Master Ormrod?" remarked Murray urbanely. "No discomforts? Enough to eat and sufficient attention?"

I profited by Ta-wan-ne-ars' example, and thrust for the one weak spot in the man's armor of egotism.

"You do proclaim yourself for what you are," I answered him steadily. "Sure, no man of breeding would descend to the depths you reach. I do assure you, fellow, if you ever return to civilization and attempt to mix with the gently bred, your plowboy origin will out."

His face was suffused to a purple hue.

"Sdeath!" he rasped. "Sir, know you not I am of the Murrays of Coblelaw? I quarter my arms with the Kiehlts! I have a right to carry the Bleeding Heart on my shield! I—"

"No, no," I interrupted. "Tis easy for you to claim here in the wilderness, but the humblest cadet of the house of Douglas would disprove you. I dislike to speak ill of any woman, and certes I could weep for the grief of her who conceived you, whatever she was. But I make no doubt she was some Huron squaw."

His face went dead white. "I was pleased with overlong to spare you," he said in accents so cold that the words fell like icicles on the ground from the rocks. "I am glad I resisted. I shall give orders now that your torments be the most ingenious our savages can devise."

"You will die," I said. "You will not, I said. 'Tis easy for you to claim here in the wilderness, but the humblest cadet of the house of Douglas would disprove you. I dislike to speak ill of any woman, and certes I could weep for the grief of her who conceived you, whatever she was. But I make no doubt she was some Huron squaw."

"And a convicted criminal," I added. He murmured to De Veulle and walked away, the savages moving from his path as if he were death in person, for indeed they feared him, more even than they feared Black Robe and their own accursed priests. He was the master of all.

"So you are to be chief torturer, monsieur le chevalier?" I remarked to De Veulle.

"Even so," he agreed. "There could not be a fitter," I said sympathetically.

"I thank you for your appreciation," he replied. "I have instructed the savages to give you the long torment. You will be still alive this time tomorrow. Think of it! Your Iroquois friend knows what that means—an eyeless, bloody wreck of a man, begging to be slain!"

He beckoned to the Cahnuga chief. "Let loose your people," he ordered, and stepped back.

The Cahnuga put his hand to his mouth, and the high-pitched, soaring notes of the war-whoop resounded through the air. And as if one directing center animated them all the thousands of savages closed in on us, yelling and shrieking, weapons menacing, feet pounding the measures of some clumsy dance.

They swirled round and round us, those who could get nearest dashing up to the stakes to mock at us or threaten us with words and weapons. Nobody touched us, but the strain of constantly expecting physical assault was nerve-racking. Ta-wan-ne-ars smiled serenely at them all, and when he could make himself heard, returned their threats.

Not Much Doubt as to Where She Stood

Attorney W. B. Ward tells of the utterance of a client he once had in Kansas City that he regarded as a classic in finality. The client was a woman who was asking to be divorced from what she termed the "most no-accountest, triflingest man that breathed."

Judge Birney figured such exhortation indicated another suttler somewhere in the background. By clever questioning he attempted to wring from the irate witness that there was another man in the case, but she stoutly denied such inference and continued with the denunciation of the hapless spouse. After an hour the court decreed the plaintiff had earned her decree and so indicated, but in passing judgment he observed verbally that the plaintiff would in all probability be married again within a month. Disregarding formality and

This continued for a long time. Twilight was at hand before they dropped back, and a select band of young warriors began to exhibit their skill with bow and arrow, knife and tomahawk. Arrows were shot between our arms and bodies; tomahawks hurtled into the posts beside our ears; knives were hurled from the far side of the open space, so closely aimed that their points shaved our naked ribs. Once in a while we were scratched; the handle of a tomahawk, poorly thrown, raised a bump on my forehead. And De Veulle, squatting on the ground with a knot of chiefs, applauded the show.

It went on and on. New forms of mental torture were constantly devised. Darkness closed down, and the fires beside the stakes were lighted. I was in a daze. I had ceased to feel fear or misgiving. I was conscious only of a great weariness and thirst.

Of a sudden I realized that the shouting had died down. The prancing figures were at rest. But into the circle of firelight swayed the hideous column of False Faces, their masks of monstrous birds and beasts and reptiles seeming alive with horrid purpose in the shifting gloom, their feet moving harmoniously in the hesitant step of the dance, their voices united in the monotonous music of their chant.

They strung a circle, as they had done the day before, and halted, heads wabbling this way and that. There was a brief pause, and I noticed De Veulle, risen to his feet and staring intently behind me, where the wall of pines made a perfect background for the spectacle. A sigh burst from the half-seen throngs of savages.

"Ga-go-sa Ho-nun-as-tase-ta!"

I craned my neck, and as well as the thongs permitted me peered around the stake to which I was lashed. A white figure flitted from the protection of the trees and glided toward us. The False Faces started a queer, rhythmic air, accompanied by gently throbbing drums. The figure commenced to dance, arms wide, hair floating free. Beside me Ta-wan-ne-ars choked back a groan of hate and love and fought fruitlessly against the rawhide thongs.

"Twas Ga-ha-no. She wore again her ceremonial uniform, the kilt and moccasins; but this time they were white, fashioned of skins taken from the bellies of young deer. Her limbs and body, too, were coated with some white substance that made her gleam like a delicate marble statue when she postured in the flickering radiance of the fires.

She tossed up her arms in a curving gesture toward the moon, riding low above the treetops. The music of the attendant priests swung into a faster measure, the pulsing of the drums became subtly disturbing, commanding. "O So-aka-ga-gwa," she cried, "I, your servant, the Mistress of the False Faces, begin now the Moon feast we make in your honor!"

She resumed her dance, but 'twas very different from the graceful, pleasing steps she had first used. I know not how to describe it, save perhaps that 'twas like the music, provocative, appealing to the basest instincts in man, indecent with a peculiarly attractive indecency. It was, I think, the dance of creation, of the impulse of life, one of the oldest and in its perverted way one of the truest dances which man ever devised. It could only be danced by a savage people, primitive and unshamed.

Faster went the measure of the dance. Faster whirled the glistening white figure. Now she danced before us, her eyes burning with mockery—I know not what—of Ta-wan-ne-ars. Now she spun around the open space in a series of intricate steps and posturings.

The music worked up to a crescendo, the drums thudding with furious speed. Ga-ha-no leaped high in air and raised her arms toward the moon, whose sickle shape was no whiter or fairer than she.

The chant stopped in the middle of a note, and as her feet touched the ground again she ran lightly across the amphitheater and threw herself into De Veulle's arms. He tossed her upon his shoulder.

"The Moon feast is open, O my people," she called back as he disappeared with her into the shadows.

All those thousands of people went mad. The dancing-place became a wild tumult of naked savages, men and women, leaping in groups and couples to the renewed music of the False Faces. Decency and restraint were cast aside.

HOME ORCHARD IS SADLY NEGLECTED

For every apple tree bearing a good crop it is safe to say that more than a thousand have been planted and allowed to die because of diseases and neglect. It is estimated by Dr. H. W. Anderson, associate chief of pomological pathology at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. If any out of the thousand do survive the diseases they are allowed to become a menace to neighboring commercial orchards which are cared for properly, he said. Better by far that all home orchards should be destroyed than that they should be allowed to breed diseases and insects to infest commercial orchards which represent the investment of fortunes, he believes.

"All of our common fruits suffer each year from numerous diseases. These are due to a variety of causes, such as fungi, bacteria and weather and soil conditions. In some years, such as the past, when dry weather prevails during the spring and early summer, the diseases are few, while in a year of normal rainfall or an excessive rainfall in the spring months, fruit crops that are not carefully protected by sprays are a total failure on account of the numerous diseases.

"Spraying is usually effective in controlling diseases, but some of the bacterial diseases such as fire blight of apple and pear have never been successfully controlled. Spraying, however, unless properly done, is of little value and under any condition is expensive. To those having small farm orchards, the cost of spray apparatus and the time required to make the applications render this method of control highly impractical. Farmers and city dwellers with small plantings have realized this, as evidenced by the neglected orchards and small fruit plantations observed in every section of the state.

"Roadside marketing, however, has made it possible for those who have the advantage of such markets to grow small plantations of trees and other fruits and make them pay. Since spraying operations are costly, these growers should make every effort to reduce their expenses by proper attention to other factors which will reduce the amount of injury.

"When the time comes to spray, study the problem of the type of spray apparatus which will be needed not only when the orchard is young but several years after it comes into bearing. Buy only the best type of spray apparatus. On this point you should consult your experiment station experts. Know what you are spraying for and study the varieties. Much expense can be saved in this way, for it will be found that certain of the varieties never scab or blotch or mildew.

"Some plan of co-operation with other growers in the neighborhood can often be put into effect so that a 'spray ring' can be formed and much better apparatus can be purchased. This problem should be carefully studied, since spray rings have not proved successful in many cases, due to lack of efficient organization.

"New spray materials recommended by the manufacturers should never be tried without first consulting the experiment station. Many of these are not only more expensive but are less efficient than well-known and tried preparations."

Black Raspberries Are Different From the Red

Black raspberries are different from the reds in more ways than one; different in color and in flavor of fruit; the bush is larger and more spreading in habit; therefore, the plants require more room. Set two and one-half to three feet in the row and rows about six feet apart. The plants each consist of a shaggy bunch of fine roots with a short piece of stem in the center, which is of no importance at all, surrounded by dormant buds which will push up and make fine strong shoots for next year, if—and listen closely to this if you will surely fail. These buds must not be buried deeply in planting or they will never appear above ground and you will lose what you paid for the plants plus your time. Cover the roots, of course, but leave the bud center close to the surface covered with not more than an inch of loose soil, or set the whole plant three or four inches below the surface, being careful not to cover the buds too deeply. As the shoots grow, hoeing and cultivating will fill the hole.

Before the end of the season, the shoots, three or four of them, will reach a height of three to four feet, each one dividing into two or more branches. The stronger ones should be staked and tied to prevent breaking by wind or in cultivating.

Repair Grape Trellises

A vineyard grape which should have attention in the early spring is the repair of the grape trellises. Missing staples should be replaced, though not driven so tightly as to pinch the wires, and the wires tightened. Loose posts should be firmed down and rotted ones replaced. The strain due to heavy cane growth and the pressure of winds is great on the trellis in a good vineyard and much fruit may be saved by caring for it. Canes usually are tied with square or grundy knots.

Costume Designed to Keep Promise in Mind

The wearing of "promisa" costumes in Santo Domingo is a custom that still holds, despite the opening up of highways and the general use of motor transportation. These costumes are often of vivid patchwork, featuring red, white and blue, and serve to remind the wearer that he or she has made a vow that must be kept.

Such vows are often nonreligious in character and involve the wearing of sackcloth. Suits and dresses of this rough fabric are frequently used. The periods for which "promises" are made vary from three months to a year. Persons of high social standing sometimes vow to wear nothing but silk for a certain period, a promise not so hard to keep as that of women who vow to wear rough linen undergarments.

Present Age Not One of Formality

William Lyon Phelps has a new name for this age.

"In 1927," he writes in Scribner's Magazine, "men are not yet able to wear doublet and hose, and while the newest dinner-jackets show some startling variations, the evening dress of gentlemen is fairly uniform. But the golf stockings that I am wearing at this blessed moment would have been booted at in the streets in 1890. Women arrange their hair and their features in public; if a man of the nineties could suddenly wake up and find himself in a modern theater, the audience would afford a more arresting spectacle than the play.

"There is nothing immoral in all this; but it is certainly informal. This universal informality makes the manners and clothes of 1890 seem as remote as the Thirteenth century."

The Eel in History

Quebec has made its annual shipment of live eels to New York city by way of the New York State canal. They comprised a total of 168 tons of slippery, squirming vitality and required the services of specially constructed tank vessels. This is the most interesting incident in the history of the eel family since an Eighteenth century Connecticut minister, Rev. Nathaniel Eells, being a graduate of Harvard and, of course, a Latinist, gave the stream that ran through his farm the name of Anguilla brook, a designation it bears to this day.

Pictures on the Clouds

Successful experiments in projecting pictures on the clouds, recently carried out at Jena, Germany, may result in the sky being used as a giant advertising board.

By means of this invention pictures may be thrown, giant-size, on the clouds, and during the recent experiments pictures came out with great clearness.

It is thought that in the near future it will be possible to show moving pictures in this way. But what would the proprietors of cinema theaters have to say about such an innovation?

Bavarian Firewomen

Why not firewomen as well as policemen, women chauffeurs, elevator girls, and all the rest? The little community of Oberloch, in the Algaun Alps of Bavaria, which lies at an altitude of 1,136 meters, is a long way from the larger villages in the valley below and cannot count upon them for help in case of fire. The women and girls have organized themselves into a fire brigade and so well are they trained that when an alarm of fire was recently sounded they beat the men to it—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Bringing Up Father

Another great domestic upheaval is reported by the Woman's Home Companion: Fathers have been admitted to parent-teachers associations. Poor old father, blinking and dazed, his head feeling reeling, can now say to himself, "At last I'm a parent! I'm a parent!"

Foolish Questions

"Did you fall down?" asked the man who had hastened to his assistance. "No!" growled Mr. Grunch, "of course not! I fell up and if you'll get out of the way I'll climb down."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ORLAND

St. Michael's church for the first time in many years, had a complete Holy Week service. With a resident pastor, Rev. Wm. A. Gorey, this was possible. Palm Sunday saw the blessing and distribution of the palms and the reading of the Passion according to St. Matthew.

Maundy Thursday, witnessed a solemn procession of white garbed and veiled little girls each carrying exquisite white calla lilies, three little flower girls with baskets, faultlessly attired small boys, surplined acolytes, accompanying the priest with the Blessed Sacrament to the repository. The children sang the Pange Lingua. Maundy Thursday is the one day of the Great Week where the services bespeak joy. It is the commemoration of the institution of the last supper, of the Holy Eucharist. During the entire day there was not a moment when some family of the parish could not be found in adoration before the repository, fittingly beautified with palms, lilies, hyacinths and lights. A sermon on the interpretation of the words spoken at the Last Supper was given in the evening.

Good Friday, the only day of the year when no Mass is solemnized. Found the church appropriately decked in black, while services representing the passion were conducted. There was a sermon and veneration of the cross in the evening. A collection was taken for the Holy Land. On Holy Saturday, the blessing of the Paschal candle, the baptismal font and the new fire took place. The beautiful climax came on Easter Sunday, with its gorgeous white vestments, flower bedecked altar and statues and an overflow congregation. Although chairs were placed by the ushers in every available spot there were some who were unable to even squeeze into the vestibule, for the 8:30 mass.

Masses, starting with next Sunday, will be according to daylight saving time, that is, at 7:30 and 9 o'clock.

A mission, to which those of all creeds, or none, are invited, is to be given by the Servite Fathers, sometime during May. The date will be announced later.

More stone for the convenience of the automobilist, has been added to the church driveway and a crushed stone walk, for the pedestrian from the highway to the drive.

STATE REGULATION OF PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMENCED IN 1806

Springfield, Ill.—State regulation of public utilities, as by the Illinois Commerce Commission in this state, is not a new development, a search of state records here discloses. It started in Massachusetts in 1806, and following the same basic principles, is now in use in 47 of the states. The federal government regulates the utilities in the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines.

The tendency is from regulation of utilities by municipalities to regulation by state governments, the records show, for there is not recorded an instance where once state regulation has been established that it has been displaced by the old-style supervision by municipalities.

The first regulation of public service companies in Illinois was in 1871, when the legislature established the Railroad and Warehouse Commission. The authority of this body was limited to regulation of intra-state railroads, express companies and public warehouses, as gas, telephone, water, electric light and power and electric railway services were either unknown or so small as to be unimportant.

However, as these newer public services developed and became more essential to the life of the people of the state, they brought with them problems too complex to be solved by anyone but experts, and salaries demanded by experts could be paid only by the largest cities. Rate-making, valuation for rate-making purposes, supervision of service and prevention of discrimination required a high degree of technical knowledge, and statistical and engineering departments, not had in small communities, who were thus placed at a disadvantage. The legislature took cognizance of this condition and established the State Public Utilities Commission, which became operative in 1914. In 1921 the organization of the regulatory body was changed, and it was called the Illinois Commerce Commission, which commission is in successful operation today.

The commission regulates rates charged by public utility companies in Illinois; prescribes their method of accounting; regulates quality and character of service rendered; must authorize all securities before they are issued; and watches that rich and poor are rendered the same service without discrimination.

Early in 1921 the governor of Arkansas questioned 43 governors concerning state regulation of public utilities. Thirty-eight governors endorsed state regulation, secretaries of two governors reported their chiefs absent, and three governors advised that their states were without commission.

A referendum by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce brought a vote of 21,825 to 1,089 in favor of state regulation, as opposed to regulation by municipalities.

HOW FAKE AUCTIONS GET YOUR MONEY

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

(This is one of a series of articles exposing the wiles of sharpers who are after your money.)

NEARLY everyone is ready "to take a fling" at getting something for nothing or at least for less than it is worth. Because of this many are duped into paying more than regular market prices for things they buy. This class of people is especially susceptible to the appeal of anything resembling an auction. Fake auctions with the cards stacked against the buyer are very common. They rank high among the fraudulent schemes of the country.

W. R. MOREHOUSE

The "here today and gone tomorrow" auction faker rents a fine looking house in some high-class section of the city in which he plans to operate. He furnishes this house with the cheapest imitations of high-class furnishings, with here and there a fine piece which is to serve for bait. Certain pieces are alleged antiques with a thread of glorious history behind them. Of others it is claimed that they have been handed down for generations, originating with some person noted in history or with some famous Southern family. Of other pieces it is maintained that they are made of rare and precious woods imported from far across the sea. The overstuffed furniture, it is claimed, is all high grade of standard manufacture.

Regardless of its superiority and antiquity, the furniture must be sold at once, for the owner is compelled to take an extended trip, the family physician having ordered travel and a change of climate as a means of saving his life. Nothing is to be spared and the deep slashings of the auctioneer's axe must go on with no price too low. Individual pre-auction sales, of course, will be arranged for persons who are unable to attend the auction.

The day of the sale is here. Purchasers are arriving. They are met at the door by the woman member of the outfit—a dramatic person who knows when to shed tears at the thought of having her happy home broken up and her valuable furnishings they find hanging in the front window a sign, "For Rent." The birds have flown, without leaving any address.

Fake auctions are not exclusive to residences, but are sometimes staged in stores. We have reports of a certain furniture firm that failed, having on hand stock invoiced at $42,000. An auction sale was announced. As usual the stock must be closed out to satisfy creditors within a few days, regardless of cost. On the windows appeared glaring announcements of big bargains. Although represented as a legitimate sale, it had the earmarks of an auction by ings torn from her. She tells her sad story—how she must leave her home and go to distant lands with her husband whose health is broken and life in danger. But she is resigned to her "awful calamity" and will sell all her lovely furniture even at a great sacrifice.

As she directs attention to certain pieces of furniture her voice quavers. She almost sobs aloud as she names the price she is forced to accept. "Less than half the original cost, but price is no object. We must take the train tomorrow," and she wipes a tear from her eye. Fully convinced the sale is genuine, and sympathizing with the unfortunate woman, buyers clamor for the furniture.

But no sooner are the articles transferred from their setting in the slightly darkened rooms of their original owner and displayed in the sunlight of the purchaser's home, than the truth about the sale begins to dawn in the mind of each new owner. Close examination reveals that evidently this wonderful collection of furniture was but odds and ends and unsalable pieces picked up from second-hand stores by these fly-by-night fakers. Some proves to be the rankest of imitations of the cheapest grade, and the overstuffed is so poorly constructed that it squeaks and weaves under the lightest weight.

Your Kidneys Must Function Properly For You to be Well

LATE hours, rich foods and stimulating drinks are all hard on our kidneys. If their action becomes sluggish, they do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes.

Such impurities may make one dull, tired and achy, with often a toxic backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness. A common symptom of imperfect kidney function is scanty or burning excretions.

Thousands have learned the virtue of Doan's Pills, stimulant diuretic in these conditions. 50,000 users have publicly recommended Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

50,000 Users Endorse Doan's:

Lambert W. Cox, Westover, Md., says: "Doan's Pills proved their value to me. My kidneys acted sluggishly and the secretions were scant and scalding. There was such a soreness across my back that I couldn't bend or stoop. I was told to use Doan's Pills and shall always be glad that I did. They put me in fine shape."

Illinois legislators in a recent conference with Gov. John Hamill, members of his cabinet, and Iowa legislators at Des Moines were assured of the co-operation of Iowa in a plan to secure uniform fish and game conservation laws for states bordering the Mississippi river. Senator Earl B. Seatey, chairman of the Illinois joint commission; Director William J. Stratton of the state department of conservation; and Representatives John Acker of Savanna, Truman A. Snell of Carlinville, and James Reeves of Champaign were the legislators who attended the conference. A similar conference with Wisconsin officials at Madison is planned.

State Entomologist W. P. Flint of Urbana discussed the European corn borer at the weekly meeting of the Springfield Kiwanis club on Wednesday, April 6. The meeting was in charge of the agricultural committee and was open to the public.

With an initial edition to be mailed April 15 the Illinois department of agriculture is launching a new service in the form of a monthly bulletin of specific information regarding the progress and condition of the leading fruit and vegetable crops of the state. Data will be obtained through the field representatives of the division of standardization and markets, and through the circularization by that department of a thousand commercial growers; this will be supplemented by information available through the division of co-operative crop estimates, and the whole will be summarized and condensed into a general review under the supervision of Joe W. Cummins. Copies of the review will be obtainable upon application to the department of agriculture, Springfield.

Henry B. Rankin, who studied law in the office of Abraham Lincoln at the time Lincoln was a member of the firm of Lincoln & Herndon, celebrated his ninetieth birthday at his home in Springfield on Thursday, April 7. Mr. Rankin is recognized as an authority on the life of Lincoln; he has written two books, "Personal Recollections of Abraham Lincoln," published in 1916, and "Intimate Character Sketches of Abraham Lincoln," published in 1924, and is consulted by students and persons of note from all parts of the country, inasmuch as he is probably the only living person who had so intimate an acquaintance with Lincoln.

An increase of approximately $400,000 in the appropriation to the five normal schools of the state was urged as a necessity if the schools are to meet the present-day demands, when the presidents of the five schools called upon Governor Small in his office recently. In addition to the five presidents, a committee from the official board, A. M. Shelton, director of the state department of registration and education, five senators from the districts in which the schools are located and the fifteen house members were present. Bills for the money needed to conduct the institutions have not been introduced in the general assembly up to date.

Lawrence Farlow, secretary of the Illinois Farmers' Grain Dealers' association, has announced the advent of the Rural Grain company, a subsidiary of the National Farmers' Elevator Grain company, into the Chicago Board of Trade. The farmers' company will become active in the cash grain market at once.

Governor Small is urging that "Clean-Up Week," the week of April 11, be given state-wide observance. Pointing out that the state's wonderful roads and natural advantages will be the means of drawing many visitors, the governor urges that the people of the villages and rural districts as well as the townspeople do all in their power to enable these visitors to carry away a worthy estimate of the state and its people. "Pep Up and Clean Up. Spring Is Here," may well be the motto of the people of Illinois.

Prohibition Administrator John B. Madden recently reported to the federal government a total of 448 inspections made in the Springfield district during the last six months. Fines aggregating $171,057 were assessed against 542 defendants in 337 cases; property valued at $302,641 was seized by agents during the period in this district, and jail sentences totaling 58 years, 5 months and 9 days were imposed and in addition penitentiary sentences totaling 12 years and 4 days for Fort Leavenworth and four years for the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

Announcement has been made from the office of the secretary of state that Hon. Louis L. Emmerson has prescribed certain rules and regulations governing the conduct of brokers and dealers in real estate bonds. The new rules became effective April 1.

not to be retroactive. The purpose of these regulations is to require financial stability of mortgage bankers and underwriters of bond issues; to make certain that the bond issue will be clearly within the limits prescribed by law; to require that funds necessary to complete building projects will be provided and maintained; to require specific guarantee of the house of issue or the underwriter of the completion of the building under construction; and accuracy in circulars and advertising matter relating to bond issues.

A bill offered by Representative Waller, Tamaroa, designed to furnish relief to counties of the state unable to meet expenses, will be considered at a session of the house committee on judiciary. It provides for an increase in the levy for county purposes from fifty to sixty cents on the hundred-dollar valuation and decreases the tax for maintenance of state-aid roads from twenty-five to fifteen cents.

Prof. H. E. Babbitt, professor of municipal and sanitary engineering at the University of Illinois, is conducting experiments in vented plumbing for the University of Illinois on the roof of the new Ridgely-Farmers' Bank building, Springfield. The expense of this project is being carried by the Master Plumbers' association and the state association. The purpose of the experiments is to show the practicability of using vents to allow air to enter the pipes in the plumbing systems of tall buildings and thus avoid breaks occasioned by overloading the system.

Plans for the construction of a sea wall at Beardstown that will furnish immunity from flood for that city at a river stage of 31 feet have been completed and specifications are now being worked out to submit to contractors, as a working basis for figuring their bids, according to an announcement made by Gov. Len Small on April 1. An appropriation of $350,000 for this purpose was voted by the legislature in 1925, and under the law this money must be expended by October of the present year. It is claimed that this wall will take care of any flood that may occur under existing conditions, though an increase in the amount of water diverted from Lake Michigan by the Chicago sanitary district might at some future time make necessary the heightening of the wall. It will be remembered that the city was inundated last fall at a flood crest of 26½ feet; while the proposed wall will furnish protection at 31 feet.

Homer J. Coppock of the Central Y. M. C. A. school, Chicago, headed a party of 25 students in a visit to Lincoln's tomb at Oak Ridge cemetery, Springfield. Mr. Coppock brings a class once a year and he is careful to arrange time enough for the students to derive all the benefit possible from such a trip.

The sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Grand Army of the Republic was commemorated on Wednesday, April 6, by the erection of two bronze tablets in the east corridor of the statehouse one of which is inscribed with Lincoln's Gettysburg address and the other with John A. Logan's general order establishing Memorial day. Past Commander in Chief John B. Inman presided at the dedicatory exercises and W. E. Barnett, acting for Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson, who was unable to be present, made the speech of acceptance. Flo Jamieson Miller, past national president of the Woman's Relief corps and the present national secretary, gave a history of the tablets. The general order establishing Memorial day, inscribed on one of the tablets, was issued by John A. Logan while he was commander in chief of the G. A. R. It is the plan of the Woman's Relief corps to place tablets of this kind in every state.

PETER'S GREAT CONFESSION

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 16: 13-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou art the Christ,
the Son of the Living God.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Pleases Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Confessing Our Faith in Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Confessing Christ Openly.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What think ye of Christ?

The disciples had been with the Lord for several years. They had heard His wonderful words and witnessed His mighty works. Various opinions were extant about Him. Since Jesus was soon to go to the cross it was necessary for the disciples to have a definite and true conception of Him. In order to help them into the right conception, He provoked this confession from Peter as the spokesman of the group of disciples.

1. Peter's Confession (vv. 13-16).
1. How provoked.
Two questions of Christ put to the disciples called forth this great confession.

(1) Whom do men say I, the Son of Man, am (v. 13).
1. He first inquired for the opinion of the people concerning Him. As a wise teacher He knew that this would help crystallize the view of the disciples. The people recognized Jesus as a teacher or a prophet, with more than human authority and power. Today, as then, there is a diversity of opinion among the people as to Jesus Christ. The multitudes today recognize Jesus as a unique personality and as having been a great teacher, but that which offends them is His deity.

(2) "Whom say ye that I am?" (v. 15).
This question involved the personal opinion of the disciples concerning Him. To be able to tell what others think of Jesus is not enough. There must be definite, correct and personal belief in Him. Personal belief is worth infinitely more than the knowledge of what others think, for upon personal belief hinges character and destiny.

2. What Peter's confession involved (v. 16).
Two vital things, the Messiahship and deity of Jesus. That which Jesus called forth from Peter is the burning question of today. "What think ye of Christ?" is the question that must be answered by everyone.

3. Christ's commendation of Peter (v. 17).
He pronounced him blessed. Truly he was blessed, for he both possessed and confessed Christ.

4. The New Body, the Church, Announced by Christ (vv. 18-20).
Christ declared His intention of bringing into existence a new body, to the members of which He will give eternal life and into whose hands He would entrust the keys of the Kingdom. Peter was to have a distinguished place in this body. Christ declared that Peter should be the foundation stone in His church. Christ is the chief corner stone upon which the church is built. Christ's person and Messiahship were confessed by Peter and on this rock (truth confessed) is laid the foundation of the apostles and prophets (Eph. 2:20). All believers are living stones of this house (1 Pet. 2:5). The keys entrusted to Peter were used on the day of Pentecost and again in the case of Cornelius.

5. The Cross the Way to the Throne (vv. 21-23).
From that time Jesus began to show unto the disciples how that He must go unto Jerusalem and suffer many things, be killed and raised again the third day. This indeed startled the disciples. They did not yet realize that redemption was to be accomplished through the passion of the cross. So unwelcome was this announcement that Peter cried: "This shall not be unto thee." Peter later saw through this darkness to the glory of the hilltops. A new hope then filled his heart (1 Pet. 1:3, 4). Many are yet stumbling over the doctrine of salvation and redemption through the suffering of the cross. Salvation by blood is hated by the devil.

6. The Cost of Discipleship (v. 24).
To follow Christ means to suffer. It means to turn one's back upon the world.

1. There must be denial of self. There is a wide difference between self-denial and the denial of self.

2. Take up His cross.
This cross is the suffering and shame which lie in the path of loyalty to God.

3. Follow Christ.
This means to have the mind of Christ; to be like Christ. Christ will come in glory to reward all such.

The Power of God
Many a battle has been won by the arrival of reinforcements. When a man is fighting a battle against his evil tendencies, the coming of the power of God into his soul often means victory. The human reinforced by the divine assures us of heaven.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Napoleon Bonaparte (Part IV)

EUROPE, for the first time in twenty years, could rest in peace and repair its shattered fortunes. Napoleon, who had been the "bogie man" of a whole scared continent, was beaten by sheer force of numbers; disowned by his own people; and safely stowed away on a distant island, where he could annoy no one. Small wonder that there was thanksgiving in Europe!

But the calm was soon broken. Barely ten months after the allies had imprisoned him on Elba, Napoleon escaped. With 1,000 of his "Old Guard" he landed in France, March 1, 1815. The news of his return swept the country like wildfire. The French nation which, a year earlier, had groaned under his yoke, went mad with joy. Louis XVIII had been a stupid, unpopular king. After a quarter century of military glory and endless excitement it had been hard for France to settle down to humdrum peaceful existence. People spoke of Napoleon as an almost immortal hero.

With one accord army and populace greeted their returned emperor with a frenzy of joy. He moved northward prepared for opposition. But he met with none. His journey to Paris was a triumphal march. Soldiers sent to arrest him flocked to his standard.

The gates were everywhere thrown open to the Corsican. Poor old Louis XVIII fled for his life, and Napoleon entered the French capital without striking a blow. In his absence people had forgotten his tyranny and selfishness and the havoc he had wrought. They remembered only his glory, magnetism and genius. He was again their idol.

But the Napoleon who returned from exile was not the same sort of man who had overawed Europe. His early life was beginning to tell on him. He could no longer concentrate his thoughts, make up his mind quickly, nor even keep awake at critical moments. He was living solely on his past fame.

The "Hundred Days" now set in. By modifying some of his former despotism the emperor won over to him those whose memories had at first proved stronger than their enthusiasm. The Royalists crept out of sight and bided their time. But the great body of the empire rallied about their former tyrant, eager to follow him against the whole universe. And they had not long to wait for a chance to prove their devotion. For the allies again rushed to arms, putting an army of 700,000 men into the field. Napoleon could muster barely 200,000 men for active service. Yet, to save France from a second invasion, he hurried his troops into Belgium, where the English, Dutch, Brunswickers, etc., under the duke of Wellington and the Prussians under Marshal Blucher, were encamped.

Napoleon knew Wellington and Blucher would try to unite at Charleroi; so he planned to get there ahead of them, thrash them each in turn and then march eastward, where the Austrian and Russian armies were gathering. The plan was worthy of Napoleon at his best. But its execution showed the past worthy Corsican at his worst. He beat the first corps of the Prussian army at Ziethen, June 13, and seized Charleroi. Then he sent part of his army, under Ney, against Wellington. The two met at Quatrebras, June 16. After a hard battle Ney was repulsed, but Wellington was forced to fall back on the heights of St. Jean, near the Belgian village of Waterloo. Meantime Napoleon, with the remainder of the French army, met the Prussians, under Blucher, at Ligny and utterly defeated them, killing 12,000. It was the last of the emperor's innumerable brilliant victories. He sent General Grouchy with 33,000 men in pursuit of the flying Prussians (in the wrong direction, as it happened), and himself started after Wellington. The French reached Waterloo late on June 17, 1815. The next day they attacked Wellington's army in one of the most bloody and epoch-making battles ever fought.

Out of all Wellington's great army only 24,000 were English, the rest being Hollanders, Belgians and Germans. Thus the popular impression that Waterloo was won by England is not wholly correct. All day the French attacked, and all day Wellington barely held his own. But at nightfall Blucher and his Prussians (who had eluded stupid Grouchy) came up. The battle had lasted eight and one-half hours. France had lost 31,000 men, the allies 23,000. Napoleon's star had set. His cause was forever lost. Again he abdicated in favor of his son, and threw himself on England's mercy.

By a stroke of diplomacy that is variously described as a necessary measure and as a flagrant breach of trust, the man who for twenty years had defied the whole world was sent to the island of St. Helena, and was kept there under strict guard until in May, 1821, he died of cancer of the stomach.

So perished Napoleon Bonaparte, genius, charlatan, wonder-worker, "holdup man" of Europe—one of the greatest men that ever lived. A man, however, not great enough to realize that selfish ambition and purely personal glory can never bring lasting success.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to all kind friends for their helpfulness and sympathy during the sickness and death of our dear husband and father. We also wish to thank Rev. Gerhold and Rev. Cramer for their comforting words and those who donated cars and flowers.

Mrs. P. H. Lorenzen and Children

An important meeting of the Mokena Hard Road Association will be held at the school house Monday night. Ladies especially are extended an invitation to be present.

Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock all the members of the Parent Teachers Association should be at the school house and participate in a real pleasant evening. Arrangements have been made by the committee in charge for several hours of enjoyment and all who attend will go to their homes well pleased and satisfied that the time and effort were well spent.

Another reason why all should attend this get together affair is the fact that an election of officers will take place and each member is urged to be present.

It is the desire of all your present officers that all members will attend. An invitation is also extended to everybody even tho you are not all members and we shall expect lots of our friends to be with us and enjoy a good time. Now don't forget all streets lead to the school house and everybody is welcome.

The play "The Rock" presented by the Mokena M. E. church at the St. John church parlors under the direction of Miss Viola Hall on Tuesday night was well attended and a wonderful success. All taking part did their best and the play was thoroughly enjoyed by all fortunate enough to see it. Don C. Hall, Jr., had charge of the lighting effects and did well.

Voice of a Snake

Besides the little hiss that seems to be common with most snakes they are generally incompetent to make any noise. There is one snake, however, the big water python or anaconda of Brazil, which gives a peculiar piercing cry at night.

Foiling the Scandal mongers

Put it out of the power of any one truly to report you not to be a sincere or a good man; let your practice give the lie; that is all very feasible, for, pray, who can hinder you from being just or sincere? To make all sure, you should resolve to live no longer than you can live honestly; for, in earnest, reason would rather you were nothing than a knave.—Marcus Aurelius.

Secret of Big Light Beam

In huge electric searchlights that cast beams visible for 50 or 60 miles on clear nights, the carbons are not like those of ordinary arc lamps. Instead, the electrodes are cored carbons containing chemicals in the cores. The main source of light is a small body of gas contained in the crater at the end of the positive electrode. This crater of gas quadruples the strength of the beam.
